

Cryptanalysis of the Enigma Machine

by Karl Zander

There are many myths in the cryptology field.

Summary:

It is my belief that the Nazi Enigma machine was constructed in a deliberate way leaving the letter A out. In other words each letter of the alphabet never encrypted to itself. The religious significance indicates that the word Allah was used in the construction of the machine. It was within the power of technology during the period of World War II to create a machine with a 5 letter key parameter, however, it may have offended the Axis' allies. This would indicate that the Enigma machine was meant to be broken and was a kind of mass surveillance cipher.

Report:

It would indicate to me that the second known Erman key was the correct key to be able to unlock the secrets of Egypt during the World War II.

The word Allah encrypted under various keys:

It would indicate to me that the Nazi's used the Enigma machine technology to spread a spell over the European continent through banking. The banking industry heavily relied on the Enigma machine. In order to confirm precisely what the spell or spells were, I would have to operate a commercial model of the Enigma machine.

Keys listed above were possibly used as a trap to see which operator would use these keys or these keys were never used and potentially forbidden to use.
